Material: Marble

Origin: Italy

Application: Wall

Variation: Shade Variation

Story

Technical innovation was the inspiration for the CNC texture by Salvatori. The motif was inspired by designer Piero Lissoni's visit to our Tuscan headquarters where he saw the Computer Numerical Control system at work. He was fascinated by the way a precise pattern could be created by experimenting with machine settings and designed the stone texture to recall this effect. CNC is characterised by a series of parallel lines that have been cut into the surface of the stone, creating a harmonious striated effect. It can be applied in uniform and random layouts in both vertical and horizontal directions. Available in Bianco Carrara, Crema d'Orcia Select, Pietra d'Avola and Silk Georgette®.

Vesuvio is a structured finish, created when the slab is shaped and baked, before being refined using a special mechanical brushing technique. Infinito is a distinctive texture which, as the name suggests, creates a seamless effect, allowing you to install it in near-infinite lengths without any joints being visible. The simplicity of the parallel lines that run across the surface gives rise to unexpected plays of light and shadow and brings out all the nuances of the natural stones used. Equally gorgeous on walls and floors, Infinito provides an interesting contrast to materials such as wood or concrete. Lighting is a key component which significantly enhances the beauty of Infinito. The key to great lighting is that it should “wash” down or across the surface, depending on whether the lines run horizontally or vertically. Available in Bianco Carrara, Crema d’Orcia, Gris du Marais®, Pietra d’Avola and Silk Georgetown®.

Price: S$41,000 ppc (before GST)
 S$2,000 ppc black iron tripod support (before GST)

Kora takes its name from a traditional musical instrument of West Africa, characterized by an elliptical shape. The reference to the music, and specifically to the sound of water, with its quiet and silent impetuosity, is the soundtrack of a new way of experiencing the bathroom, where Kora is its main protagonist.

The tub rests on an iron tripod that supports its volume, giving stability and elegance. Suspended from the floor, despite the strength of the material, the water finds in Kora a new lightness. Marble is free from its weight and floats in the air.
